BRYCE HUNSAKER
BIOLOGY, SENIOR

A few things about me:

I was born in Houston, Texas, November 25, 1990. I have one older brother, two younger sisters, and two awesome parents. At age five I moved to Sacramento, California, and was there until my college career. My freshmen year of college I came to Utah State University and fell in love with Logan, Utah. It was a big relief to get out of the high school scene and see how I did on my own. I always thought that I was going to follow in the footsteps of my father by becoming an Electrical Engineer and work at Intel. That all changed when I got back from serving a LDS mission in North Carolina. I realized that my passion was in fact not Electrical Engineering and decided to switch to Biology, I've loved it ever since. My hobbies include wake boarding, snowboarding, and getting caught in the rain. I am currently the President of the USU Men's Club Volleyball Team. We just had our last tournament in Reno where we did very well. I am also a volunteer at the Cache Valley Community Health clinic, and an employee at both Community Nursing Services and Live Music Tutor. I've met some amazing people at Utah State, and started some friendships that I believe will last a lifetime.
