USU Public Health faculty, Carl Farley recently completed the requirements to become an Occupational Health and Safety Management Systems (OHSMS) Auditor, a new certification created to recognize auditors capable of identifying and addressing potential hazards in the workplace. In order to qualify to test, candidates must have a required combination of education, training, experience, and auditing hours. Passing the OHSMS Auditor Registry Exam is required to earn the credential and be listed on AIHA Registry Programs’ website.
Read the entire article here.